2020 International Summer School on »German Law and German Culture« (GLGC), July 19 – August 8

Europe is a cultural hub with common roots and common notions – yet it is a very diverse continent with differences in language, history, religion etc. This pluralistic cultural side of Europe is balanced by the process of integrating nation states into a wider political institution – the EU and various European institutions. In order to understand these differing prospects, it is worth to look at one country that is at the very heart of the European project: Germany. It is part of a pluralistic culture and at the same time a motor of economic and political development toward an ever increasing European integration.

Program

The summer school gives an introduction into various fields of social, political, and economic developments – all mitigated by the specific approach to view the world through the eyes of the law. This explains questions as how to allow for globalization and at the same time to respect local values? How does good governance link effectiveness of government action with participation of citizens and/or reciprocity in public-private relations? At the same time, it shows how human rights policy, free market, and competition can help each other in order to follow a common goal: safeguarding human dignity and creating a society that allows for both, the realization of human rights as well as for economic and social development.

The program offers an in-depth view on current debates in academia and practice. It combines practical topics such as visits to institutions with cultural courses and in-depth sessions concerning professional knowledge. The summer school is comprised of lectures, workshops, excursions, and discussions. Main topics are as follows:

Module I »Introduction into German and European Public Law«

Module II »Introduction into German and EU Private and Business Law«

Module III »Criminal Law between National Legislature and European Framework«

Module IV »German Culture as Part of European Culture«

We offer
